

Better Choice Chips

This Really Good Stuff® product includes:

- 40 Better Choice Chips
- This Really Good Stuff® Activity Guide

Congratulations on your purchase of these Really Good Stuff® Better Choice Chips—simple and nondisruptive ways to redirect inappropriate student behavior.

Introducing the Better Choice Chips

Before introducing the Better Choice Chips, make copies of this Really Good Stuff® Activity Guide and file the pages for future use. Or, download another copy of it from our Web site at www.reallygoodstuff.com.

Determine how you will fit the Chips into your behavioral management plan and how you will handle multiple incidents of poor behavior.

After discussing with students your expectations regarding their behavior in school and in your classroom, indicate that you will be carrying several Better Choice Chips with you during school days. Tell students that should one of them demonstrate inappropriate behavior, you will hand him or her a Chip, or leave one on his or her desk. Explain that you will then follow up with the student at a more convenient time and privately to discuss his or her responses to the questions on the back of the Chip.

Or, make copies of the Better Choice Commitment Form Reproducible and keep a stack of them in an accessible place in your classroom. Instead of following up with a student each time, indicate that any student to whom you give a Chip is to complete the reproducible and return it to you. Tell the class that you will keep each completed reproducible in that student's file for the year, for future reference for report cards, parent conferences, and so forth.

Discuss the repercussions should a student receive multiple Chips in a day and/or week. For instance, you may decide to send the completed reproducibles home to be signed and returned.
